you really need to.

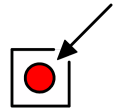

Miss Trunchbull has just been very unkind to .....

Matilda sits down at her table in the classroom.

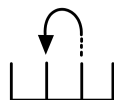

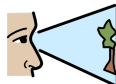

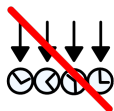

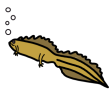

Miss Trunchbull pours some ..... into the glass.

The ..... Lavender put in the jug lands in the glass with a plop! Miss Trunchbull is very ..... of the newt. She has never seen one before! She thinks it is a

.....

..... decides Matilda must have put the newt

in

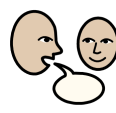

the

jug.

Matilda

tries to

this

isn't

..... Miss Trunchbull does not listen to Matilda and

cross.

Matilda

gets

more

and

cross.

Matilda

cross, too.

Suddenly,

Matilda

begins to have a

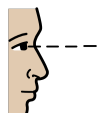

strange

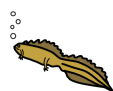

feeling

in her

..... as she stares at the glass of water with the

newt

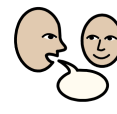

She

is so

about being

told

the newt

is her

fault.

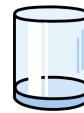

She

focuses on

glass

and eventually,

strangely, seems to .....

knock it over

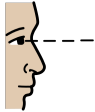

using

only

her

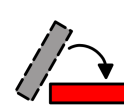

stare!

Miss Trunchbull is ..... when the

falls over.

She

is sitting down,

so the

water

soaks

her

top

and

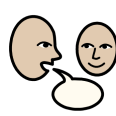

the newt

clings to it!

She

says

Matilda

must have done

it.

Matilda

says,

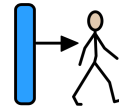

'I have

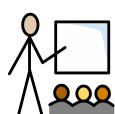

not

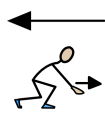

moved away from my .....

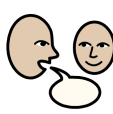

since

the lesson began.

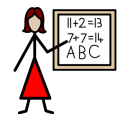

I can say no more.'

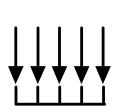

The children

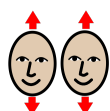

and

Miss Honey

all

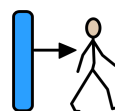

agree

Matilda

has not

left

her

seat,

so how could

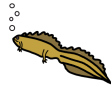

she

have

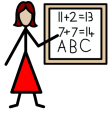

done

it?

Miss Trunchbull is so cross she leaves the .....

thinks

the class

have had enough for the day

and

sends

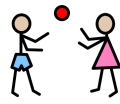

them

out

to

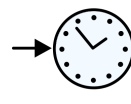

play

in the

playground

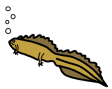

until

time.
